

Nancy Hudgins's debut book is:

BOOKS GOOD ENOUGH FOR YOU: The Extraordinary Life of Children's Book Editor Ursula Nordstrom

To be published by Abrams in 2026, it's a middle grade biography chronicling Ursula's early life and following her career through 16 iconic children's books she edited, from Goodnight Moon to Charlotte's Web to Harold and the Purple Crayon to Where the Wild Things Are to Harriet the Spy to I'll Get There. It Had Better Be Worth the Trip. Painfully shy at first, over a 37-year career Ursula grew into a force of nature, championing children's books that challenged old assumptions and charted new territory that others followed.

Nancy was born and raised in Virginia, graduated from Boston University and the University of Virginia School of Law and then practiced law in California. After one brief dip into writing a children's book in 2001, she trained to be a mediator and began to help settle disputes as well as continuing to practice law.

When she began thinking about writing children's books in earnest, she attended multiple writing-for-children seminars through the Society of Children's Book Writers and Illustrators and the Highlights Foundation and participated in critique groups through Inked Voices. Now she focuses on writing biographies and nonfiction.

Nancy lives in Northern California, where she and her rescue dog, Buddy, are co-stewards of a Little Free Library dedicated to children's books. The proud mother of two teachers, when not researching, writing and revising new books, Nancy enjoys bocce, hiking, soccer (watching), board games and jigsaw puzzles. She has been known to binge-watch a TV show or two.

She is delighted to be represented by Rachel Orr at Prospect Agency.
